2027 Graduate Student Stipend Scholarship

The Department of Pathology and Microbiology at the Atlantic Veterinary College (AVC), University of Prince Edward Island (UPEI), invites applications for its 2027 Graduate Student Scholarship Competition. The successful candidate will receive a minimum annual stipend of $34,165 to support graduate studies at AVC, with the opportunity to begin as early as May 1, 2027.

Applications are welcome from Canadian and international candidates holding a BSc, MSc, DVM, or an equivalent degree. Applicants should have a strong academic record and relevant academic, research, or professional experience.

Candidates will be evaluated based on their academic achievements, research experience, and potential for success as graduate researchers. The successful candidate must meet AVC's graduate admission requirements and identify a suitable graduate program currently available at AVC.

Prospective applicants must contact faculty members before applying to identify a potential supervisor who is willing to support their proposed graduate program.

For more information, please consult the following sources:

The deadline for the competition is January 10, 2027.

Applicants must submit the following material by email:

- A letter of intent outlining the name of their potential supervisor, their academic background, research interests, and motivation for pursuing graduate studies at AVC.
- A curriculum vitae (CV).
- Official university transcripts.
- The names and contact information, including email addresses, of three referees.

Please email all application materials to:
